"Your College is ten years old. Come to its birthday Open House and see what it can do for you."

This is the gist of the invitation being issued by Cariboo College officials, staff and students to the 140,000 people of the College region, urging them to spend at least part of Saturday, September 27 on the McGill Road campus.

A wide range of demonstrations, displays and other attractions awaits the visitors at what will be the first full-scale Open House the College has staged since 1976. Classrooms, vocational shops and laboratories will be specially outfitted for the occasion, and will be staffed by faculty and students ready to explain special features and answer questions about any of the nearly 50 academic, career and vocational courses and programs.

The various events and exhibits will be under way from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The only scheduled event occurs at 10 a.m. when the College officially opens the new Science Building. This building is expected to be one of the major attractions, with demonstrations and colorful, informative displays set up in the various laboratories.
