NEWS RELEASE

Winner of the N. Harrison English prize for 1980 at Cariboo College is Darwyn J. Stickle, a student in the English 121 section instructed by Roderick J.W. Michell.

The prize is for outstanding achievement in first-year English. It was established by the College Board in 1979 in honor of Cariboo College's founding principal. It carries a $200 award value. The presentation will form part of the annual Awards Night Banquet at the College Cafeteria on June 13.

The second competition, like the first, was close, according to English Department Chairperson Ron Miles. Runners-up included Christina Kohaupt, Gregory Campbell and Gordon Weeks.

Stickle was born and raised in Williams Lake and came to Cariboo from Columneetza Secondary. He has been active in campus affairs, serving as internal vice-president of the Student Society and as student representative to the College Board's Education Committee. He also maintained a high scholastic record.

His future plans include writing, both prose and poetry. His intention is to enrol next year in the University of Victoria "Co-op" program in creative writing.
